The present invention generally relates to systems and methods for processing communication packets. The ubiquitousness of digital communication technologies and of the internet, has resulted in the wide-spread use of the internet for business, educational, and recreational purposes. The number of people connected to the internet and the number of internet service providers has increased dramatically in the last decade, and the rate of growth in these areas is likely to continue in the coming years. Thus, there is a wide base of potential users who are connected to the internet and who have a relatively high quality, bandwidth-intensive connection, which can be used for communication. This group of users can use internet-based systems and methods to transmit and receive information. Various Internet-based systems and methods exist, which allow users to transmit and receive information. For example, instant messaging ("IM") can be used to transmit and receive text messages over the internet. IM may be used to exchange information between users connected to the internet. Another form of communication that can be used is the email. An email can be exchanged by using email gateways, which are often used by a user to communicate with users who have "email" accounts with a mail server. One disadvantage of email systems is that email messages tend to be large in size, and it is often difficult for a user to download the email messages. Currently, various 82157476af
